A new venue is bringing people together through games, creativity and community.

The Dice Citadel, based in Oswestry, is a dedicated space for tabletop gaming, painting, and collecting.

The team behind the project said: "The hobby community is fantastic, and our main goal was to create a space where people with shared interests can meet, hang out, and build friendships.

"Seeing people come together and enjoy their hobbies here is deeply rewarding, and we're excited to see this community continue to grow."

The idea for the venue grew from the success of World of Collectables, a shop on Willow Street, where customers frequently asked if there was space to play games in-store.

Although the original shop couldn't accommodate play tables, the demand inspired the team to look for a larger venue.

They found an opportunity at 31A Bailey Street, despite the building requiring significant renovation.

After weeks of work and support from friends, the team began work on the new space the very next day after launching World of Collectables on August 28.

The new venue includes a custom-built Dungeons & Dragons room and dedicated areas for tabletop gaming and hobby activities.

It aims to be a welcoming environment for gamers, painters, and collectors of all experience levels.
